

Abstract of the Disclosure:

In a method for configuring an automation installation, a provider stores configuration data in a database. A buyer or client can download a copy from the database. Preferably, there is also stored in the database a description that is associated with the configuration data and which is also available for download by the user.